A big thankyou goes out to all the family who have helped by sharing photographs and stories to enable us to put together their life story.

While every effort has been taken to accurately record our family's history from oral and factual sources, the passage of time has left many gaps in their life story that may forever remain unknown to their descendants.

Sarah and Michael marriage certificate.

When Michael Reid was nine years old, he suffered a terrible accident. A newspaper article reports that he was driving a whim at the Prince Alfred Mine, South Australia and dislocated his kneecap after some timber fell on him. He was badly hurt and sent to the Adelaide Hospital being admitted on the 19 January 1874 about a week after the accident. He must have been in excruciating pain.

At nine he was very young to be working at the mine. The Prince Alfred Mine was primarily a copper mine located south east of Hawker, past Cradock.

Sarah Reid (Left) and two of her children Mabel (May) and Herbert (Fagon).

Family stories recall that Michael and Sarah lived a very transient life. In the years after their marriage, they lived in a wagon and tents travelling from one job to the next. Michael's occupations included bore sinker, dam builder, carrier, boundary rider and dog fence rider. Most of his life was spent in northern South Australia and western Queensland and New South Wales. Records show they lived in Milparinka, Thargomindah, Hawker, Farina, Murnpeowie Station and Nappa Merri Station.

Their granddaughter, Lorna Shearer, told how Sarah had given birth to several of her children on a tarp on the ground next to their wagon.

Lorna also recalls stories about how, when their children reached working age, Sarah found work for them at whatever station they happened to be at and left them there when they went to the next job. It is likely the children would have only been 14 years old or possibly younger at the time.

His granddaughter, Lorna Shearer nee Johnston, recalls stories of Michael working as a boundary rider on the dog fence at Nappa Merrie Station before he died.

Michael settled in Farina from 1899 to 1905, after that he moved from station to station in the region again, finally working and living on Napper Merri station on his own. His wife Sarah and some of their children were living in Faria.

The Dog Fence

The longest fence in the world

The South Australian section of the dog fence is 2 250km long. It forms part of an unbroken barrier that stretches over 5 300km through South Australia, Queensland and New South Wales. It is the only barrier that prevents dingoes entering the sheep grazing country in the south.

When they breach the fence, the attacks on livestock that follow are a chilling reminder of how much our multi-million dollar industry relies on the dog fence.

Before the dog fence, many sheep grazing ventures failed because of dingo attacks on stock.

There is no doubt that in South Australia the old saying 'No dog fence — no sheep industry' rings true.

No public access is permitted along the dog fence.

By the late 1880s, more affluent farmers were building netting fences around their properties. The fences gradually merged to become vermin-proofed districts. They spread outwards and enclosed a large area of the state.

In 1946 the outside line of the vermin district became the 'dog fence'. The section you can see is part of that structure.

Large numbers of dingoes still exist outside the dog fence.

Michael on the 1919 Electoral roll.

Sarah moved to Farina before Michael's death in the early 1920's, possibly from Innamincka. It is not clear why she was in Farina as it is believed she had no family there. In the 1924 Sands and McDougall Directory there is no Reid family members recorded as living in Innamincka nor any of the Reid family recorded as living in Farina.

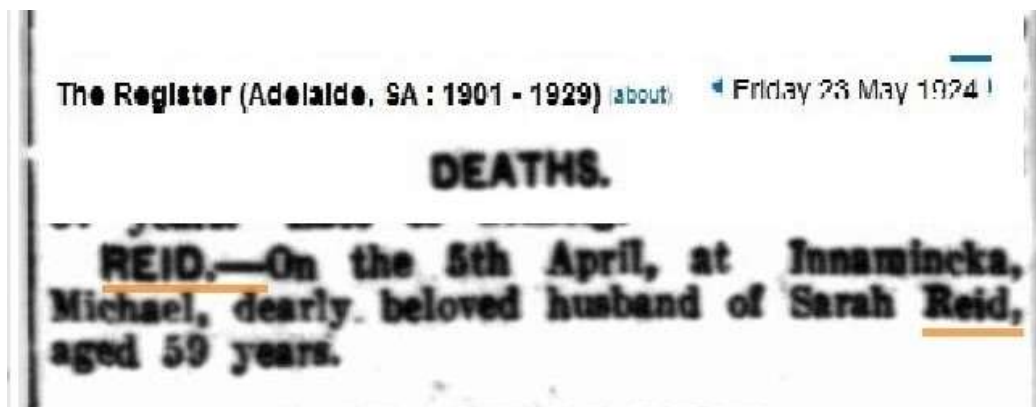

However, Lorna Shearer recalls being told that Sarah and some of the children were living in Farina when Michael died. It is possible Farina was the most suitable northern town and she set up a house for her family while Michael continued to work on Nappa Merrie Station.

Lorna retells the story about how her Grandfather, Michael, had been unwell and in 1923 and travelled to Adelaide to see a Doctor. He found out he had cancer. However, rather than telling his wife of his diagnosis, he returned to work at Nappa Merri. He progressively deteriorated until he was taken to Innamincka where he died on 5 April 1924. He was buried in the Innamincka Cemetery in an unmarked grave. However, family members that descend from Michael and Sarah's eldest son David, have since placed a memorial plaque for him at the cemetery.

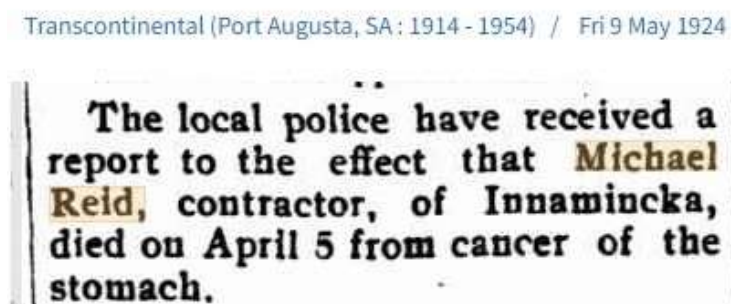

Why didn't he tell his wife of his illness? Why didn't he go to Farina? This part of the story may never be known.

In the book by H M Tolcher, "Innamincka-The Town with Two Lives" Michael's death is recorded as "Michael Regan (Reid), 5 April 1924. Described as an "old identity, Regan (Reid) died of an internal complaint '.

Michael died 5 April 1924 in Innamincka, South Australia. None of the family were able to attend his funeral.
